

My priorities as Spelthorne's Member of Parliament

Increase NHS funding by spending less on foreign aid

The NHS is short of money. Yet the United Kingdom wastes billions on foreign aid projects in wealthy and corrupt countries. The government's priorities are wrong.

Let's reduce foreign aid and spend the money saved on recruiting doctors and nurses instead.

Abolish university tuition fees for STEMM subjects

For the United Kingdom to maintain its status as a leading global economy it is essential that our brightest young people study science, technology, engineering, maths and medicine at university.

Let's encourage students to study STEMM subjects by abolishing tuition fees for them.

Reduce immigration and make the system fairer

The current immigration system discriminates in favour of EU passport holders and allows more people to settle here than our infrastructure and public services can cope with.

Let's reduce immigration and bring in a system that is fair to all nationalities.

Ensure Heathrow eases congestion and delivers cleaner air

The expansion of Heathrow Airport is almost certain to go ahead. This will have many benefits for the local economy, but will put huge pressure on local roads and rail services and could worsen air quality.

Let's make sure Heathrow pays its fair share to improve the road and rail network and deliver cleaner air.

Invest in improving the commuter railway network instead of HS2

The commuter rail network is in desperate need of investment to increase reliability and efficiency. Yet tens of billions will be wasted on HS2 reducing journey times to places like Birmingham.

Let's spend that money on improving the commuter railway network.

Increase the amount we spend on defending our country

The first duty of government is to ensure the defence of our country. In recent times the world has become a much more dangerous place, but the government has cut our military to the bone.

Let's increase what we spend on the armed forces to improve our country's defences.
